

PCJWSA Director Sean Lambert

I grew up in Lincoln City, spending quite a bit of my free time at the beach and fishing. After finishing high school, I moved to Salem and attended Willamette University. At Willamette, I graduated with a BS in physics, with minors in mathematics and computer science.

After graduating in 1994, I moved to Portland where I worked for an advertising and public relations firm for about four years. The owners of the agency offered $1000 to the first person to get a tattoo of the name of the agency. I jumped at the chance, received my $1000 (before taxes!) and still wear the tattoo today.

After working for a couple of software companies in Portland, my fiancé Shae and I decided to relocate back to the Oregon coast. I started working at Tillamook County Creamery Association (TCCA) in 2003. In September 2003, we got married at Camp Westwind and moved to Pacific City in January of 2004.

On Father's Day in 2005, Shae and I welcomed our daughter Sophia into the world. Sophia decided that she wanted to arrive six weeks early. Sophia spent about 10 days at OHSU, but finally got to come home to the beach. Now Sophia is a Younger (first grade) at Neskowin Valley School and is full of energy.

I still work in the IT department at TCCA as the Applications Manager. I have spent time on a number of other boards in Tillamook County, including Nestucca Ridge Homeowner's Association, Tillamook Urban Renewal Agency and Tillamook Farmers' Market board. Being a recreational runner, I appreciate and consume more than my share of drinking water, so I look forward to serving on the PCJWSA board to learn more about the processes and people that support our community water supply. Hopefully my experience will help benefit the agency.
